

Ἐξαποστειλάριον

Ἡχος ἡ Γα ϕ

The musical notation consists of two staves of neumes (short vertical strokes) written in black ink on a white background. Red ink is used for several purposes: to indicate pitch levels (like the top line of a staff), to mark specific notes (such as the first note of each line), and to highlight certain neumes with red outlines or strokes. The lyrics are written in Greek below the staves.

Below the musical notation, the lyrics are written in Greek:
